Skating Chiefs win fourth game in a row Morris lights up the hockey night

By Chas Kelley

Jim Morris, the Chiefs' leading scorer for the past three seasons, has been struggling thus far this season. He has played in eight games without scoring a goal; all of his points coming from assists. Last Saturday in the Chiefs' 6-3 win over U.S. International University, Morris exploded by scoring a hat trick (that is three goals for you non-hockey people), justifying why he is nearly the top scorer in the Hockey East.

Goalie Ken Stein picked up his second win in three starts this season, stopping 19 USIU shots in the process.

The widely acclaimed front line of Jim Morris, Jim Newhouse, and Randy LeBrasseur was united for the second straight game, and accounted for four of the six ULowell goals.

The opening minutes set the game to be defensive and highly physical. Throughout the first period, both teams combined for ten penalty minutes. The Chiefs finally broke the monotony by scoring after a lengthy 14:16 had ticked away.

Newhouse scored with help from LeBrasseur and recently unleashed scoring threat Carl Valimont. This was the only meaningful part of the first period.

The "Super Line" of Morris, Newhouse, and LeBrasseur added further damage to Gull goalie Matt Atkinson almost halfway into the second period. Newhouse and LeBrasseur set up Morris' first goal of the evening. The Gulls came back just twenty seconds later with a goal of their own.

Student life and the suitcase college

By Chuck Mahaleris

The final edition in the series on the University of Lowell's expansion, this installment focuses on the offerings that will be available to students.

Some students have come through the university and not bothered to see what there was offered to them. Other students have come through and looked around, only to be disgusted by the lack of opportunities and events available to the students.

This group of students have deemed ULowell a "suitcase college." You come to the university, unpack your life, but rarely leave your apartment or room because there is confusion, chaos, and limited student functions.

In the next few years, the university will erect a student center near the Mill Complex. This building is proposed to be a four story building that will be an activities and club center for students to congregate and relax.

Mary Conley, the Student Activities Director, would like to see the student center become a "living room of the campus."

In the perfect world, or as close as the university is likely to come, Mary envisions this building as holding student club offices, a commuter lounge, game rooms, small stores and shops, a cafeteria, WJUL, The Connector, the SGA, and Sojourn. It would become an area for students to meet, chat, and get interested with the university around them.

But this building is not scheduled to be completed until 1992, what about now you may rightfully wonder.

Next semester, Mary will be organizing a committee of students and faculty to look at the needs and design of the center. But perhaps more importantly for the immediacy, plans have been brought up to improve the current student centers.

Students have begun looking into ways to improve the look and atmosphere of the North Campus commuter lounge, and the

The University of Lowell Student Athletic Trainers Club will be sponsoring a seminar on Back Education on December 15, 1987 at 5:00 p.m. in Costello Gymnasium classroom. Barbara Gosselin, PT, Director of Back Education at Therafit Physical Therapy Clinic will present a lecture on back dysfunction and rehabilitation. The seminar is open to all ULowell students, staff and faculty.

Racial Awareness(RAD)

On Tuesday, December 8th, Racial Awareness (RAD) was sponsored by students from Jacqueline Fidler's Values and Creative Thinking class. RAD was the end result of a class assignment in which students were to develop a project that would benefit the community. The purpose of RAD was to promote racial unity within the university. The RAD slogan was "Racism: It's not just a black and white issue."

RAD was symbolized by black and white ribbon tied in bows to illustrate the unity of the races. These bows were handed out on Racial Awareness Day.

Campus Ambassadors

It seems that many people, of all things, become depressed at this particular time of the year either because they just can't seem to get into the "holiday spirit" or because of the "let down" after the final present is unwrapped. Why does it seem that, for the average American, the constitutional right of the "pursuit of happiness" remains just that--a never ending pursuit, with disappointments at every turn, even during what we anticipate as the happiest time of the year

Let me suggest that our, disappointments are not because our expectations are too high, but that we are seeking the fulfillment of the expectations in the wrong sphere entirely. Think about that gorgeous sweater or that pair of skis that you got last Christmas. The sweater is probably getting a little ratty maybe even out of style by now. And did the skis really perform quite the way you thought they would, or maybe you just haven't had all the time to enjoy them that you'd anticipated? I think most adults will agree, albeit reluctantly, that material things just never seem to bring all the happiness they'd like.

So, perhaps you may seek happiness in a relationship. You look forward to being with your family over the holidays. And yet it seems that almost inevitably, the same old misunderstandings and tensions crop up to spoil the time together. Even a love relationship with that special guy or girl seems to loose that heart palpitating excitement after a while.

So what's left? Perhaps the only conclusion must be that the sphere we should perhaps be looking to, to fulfill our highest expectations, may not even be an earthly one, but a spiritual one. Throughout the Bible we are told of the joy that a personal relationship with God brings--and the joy of an infinite, eternal God must surely supercede any joy we can achieve through our own finite, mortal actions. Jesus Christ Himself said, "These things have I spoken to you, that My joy may be in you, that your joy may be made full." He offers to all who will accept Him, a relationship of complete understanding and love, and He promises to never fail or let down any who come to Him. If you've ever experienced the gnawing emptiness that things, or even relationships, can never seem to fill, this could be what you've been looking for, for so long. "Joy to the World, the Lord is Come!"

If you are concerned about your relationship with God and would like to talk with someone about it, please feel free to contact Campus Ambassadors at SIC Box 111N or call 667-9529.

Are you an adult child? *

- ☐ Do I often feel isolated and afraid of people and authority figures?
- ☐ Have I observed myself to be an approval seeker, losing my own identity in the process?
- ☐ Do I often feel I'm a victim in personal and career relationships?
- ☐ Do I sometimes feel I have an overdeveloped sense of responsibility, making it easier to be concerned with others rather than myself?
- ☐ Do I get guilt feelings when I stand up for myself instead of giving in to others?
- ☐ Do I confuse love with pity and tend to love people I can pity and rescue?
- ☐ Do I find it hard to feel or express feelings, including happiness?
- ☐ Do I find I judge myself harshly?
- ☐ Do I have a low sense of self-esteem?
- ☐ Do I often feel abandoned in the course of my relationships?
- ☐ Do I tend to be a reactor instead of an actor?

If you identify with many of these characteristics and come from a dysfunctional home, you may wish to seek help.

For further information, contact Pat Davison - Campus Ministry, Maureen Wolfenden - Student Health Services, Dr. John Baylis - Counseling.

*While many members of the population identify with some or all of these characteristics, a study conducted by Dr. Robert Ackerman revealed that adult children possess these characteristics 20% more often than adults in general.

Student Phone Fraud

"Several Hundred" U. of Texas students, including an organized group of about 40 fraternity members, have turned themselves in for making illegal phone calls, while SoutherNet, an Atlanta-based long distance company claims it's closing in on illegal student phone users on 6 Alabama campuses. The Texas students surrendered in response to an offer by Metromedia Long Distance Co., which promised not to prosecute people who confessed and promised to pay for their calls by Nov. 20. About 480 Sam Houston State U. students turned themselves in to a similar Metromedia program in September. All these students are using computers to discover and exchange long distance phone credit card numbers.

On-Campus Preachers Annoy Arizona Students

Hoping to keep "extremely obnoxious" preachers away from students who don't want to listen to them, U. of Arizona students James Gillis and Keith Shachat began passing out "complaint forms" last week. The two students hope to use the forms to get UA administrators to banish them to a proposed "speaker's corner" on campus for those not directly sponsored by a university group. An action similar to the one proposed was taken by the U. of Virginia in 1984, which limited freelance speakers to certain times and places. The UA evangelists promise to fight it. One Robin Brand claims, "They will have to drag me from the mall, I am here to preach the gospel, and I have freedom of speech to back me up."

More Student Government Scandals

Two weeks ago, U. Chicago students kicked all 50 members of their campus government out of office because of election fraud. Some of the candidates had stuffed ballot boxes while others weren't registered as students or didn't have enough signatures on their nomination petitions. At U. Missouri, student legislators may impeach and replace all members of the student government's judicial branch, since the student court hasn't convened in 3 years. At Yale, student government presidential candidate Alex Mishkin has been blasted by other student legislators for allegedly making exaggerated and inaccurate campaign remarks.

ULowell Eagle Scout hits Aussie

By Chuck Mahaleris

Once every four years, thousands of Boy Scouts worldwide travel to various lands to take part in a phenomenal event that few ever experience in their lifetimes. This year, during the winter break, freshman and Eagle Scout Mark Garneau will be travelling to Australia for the 16th World Scout Jamboree.

The World Jamboree is an event where scout representatives from 113 different nations, different races, and different customs join together to share common ideals that have made up the Boy Scout tradition for over 75 years. While there, the scouts will take parts in events that promote cultural exchanges and inter-relations. Mark himself will be active as an assistant scoutmaster and will be rappelling over cliffs in Melbourne, Australia and splunking through those same cliffs.

Mark is currently one of the ULowell LUSTers and is a distance swimmer. Before attending the university, Mark was captain of the Lowell High Swim Team and has been strongly active in the Boy Scout programs since 1981. Having filled the role of Lodge Chief for the local Boy Scout Order of the Arrow Lodge,

'This is one of the biggest things that has ever happened to me.'

Mark is no stranger to responsibility and determination. Both of these attributes have been necessary in helping make his way to Aussie.

During the summer months, Mark worked to earn the needed 3000 plus dollars needed for the excursion. Then there were interviews and forms to determine if he was a suitable candidate to represent the United States at the annual event. Having past these red tape procedures easily, Mark joined his troop of Northern New England scouts and scouters to prepare for the big events. Mark is going to be one of the 451 scouts from the area to attend this year.

"Awesome," was the word Mark first used to describe the opportunity he will embark on December 18, an opportunity that will hurl him from one culture to another as he will be staying with a down-under family for the Christmas holiday. "This is one of the biggest things that has ever happened to me," stated Mark. "It will be a memory I'll treasure forever."

Woman injured

defunct Commuter Council has been reformed to address the concerns of the travelling student.

Campus police dispatcher in court

According to an item in the Lowell Sun, Campus police dispatcher Anthony Cathcart was ordered to appear at Lowell District Court on Dec. 29 for a pre-trial conference.

Lowell police stated that Cathcart broke into a Hilton hotel room, twice assaulted an unidentified woman, stole money from her boyfriend's wallet while he slept.

Cathcart, who once was a security guard at the Hilton, faces charges of assault with intent to rape, indecent assault and battery on a person over the age of 14, larceny of property over $100, and breaking and entering a dwelling.

Former student dies suddenly in California

By Brian Chase

Gail O'Brien, a former student at the University of Lowell and for the last six months a student at the University of California died suddenly on December 3rd in Santa Ana, Cal.

Gail had gone to California to further pursue her dreams, dreams begun here at ULowell. She started here in 1984, a freshman computer science major. Gail had graduated from Weymouth South High School, where she had developed an interest in art and photography and also was fond of music and the arts. Playing the flute very well, Gail took lessons at the South Shore Conservatory of Music in Hingham.

Gail remained in computer science for two years and then changed her major to Art, which had been her dream and ambition.

She spent a year in the Art Department here in Lowell, making many dear friends through her stay here. She finally realized her ambitions were driving her to a change of scenery, and last May she decided to transfer to a school in California and pursue art and photography in that part of the country.

She often spoke of how happy she was there, and had wished we could all see her fantastic apartment and see her happiness there.

Gail planned to come home soon, but she became suddenly ill last week and died soon after. The doctors assure that the end was quite painless. I only wish the young did not die so soon, and sometimes so far away.

She had spoken many times of perhaps compiling a book of her photography and paintings and regrettably it now will never be written. A friend has stated however, and I quote "perhaps it has already been written."

I know she was happy far away in California, and I also know that I'll miss her forever—we all will, because she touched so many in her all too brief stay.

Donations in Gail's name may be made to the Juvenile Diabetes Association, 11 Gilmore Road, Southboro, MA 01772.

Cruel cat killing

By Margaret Smith

A student prank may have caused the death of a cat who frequented the Crescent dormitory on Hilton Ave.

The black, long haired cat spent much time in the driveway between the Crescent and Donohoe buildings. It is believed to have become sick from licking white paint, evidently put on its back to make it look like a skunk. A female student took the cat to a local veterinarian, who could do nothing for it but put it to sleep.

Robert Vallis, Resident Director for the Crescent, believes the cat belonged to someone in an apartment building between the Crescent and the Donohoe. That building is not student housing. Vallis himself last saw the cat

Dec. 1. He said that at that time the cat had a "very faint white stripe." Vallis later heard "that the cat was very sick and that it had a white stripe down its back," but does not know who may have applied paint to the cat. He also cautions that the cat may have become sick after brushing up a wet paint job.

Several dorm residents, however, report that the cat was deliberately painted by an intoxicated student. Many were saddened and angered by the cat's death. News of the incident "hit me like a ton of bricks," said one student. She described it as "outrageously cruel."

The Connector plans to further investigate this incident and will report any new developments in the first issue of next semester.

Tragedy claims ULowell student

ULowell student Scott Gendron died in an automobile accident this past Monday at 6:30 in the morning. An active student, he was involved in the Karate Club, the Magick Club, and R.O.T.C. His untimely death will create a void in the lives of his friends and those who knew him here at the university—he will be missed.

Students love them

"Who of the four-legged you like the best?" This was the question which the students were asked during the last survey. 40% of the students named a cat, a dog, and a horse. 60% named the bed.

Half the problem has been solved. A year ago Professor C. Bignose, who is an expert in advanced materials, was granted $10,000 to develop a technology for converting cow manure into sweet butter. Last week he reported about his progress. "We have already spent half the money and solved half the problem," said the professor to his colleagues. "The stuff we obtained can be easily spread over a slice of bread."

It really makes money

A new machine for making money is invented in the Machine Department. The inventor of this unusual machine, Prof. Bill Penny-Wise, told us about the operation of the Machine. It is fed with paper, paint, and the original bill from which the copy is taken. Then, one quarter must be dropped into the slot. Ten minutes later a new bill, which is the exact copy of the original one, is finished. Unfortunately, said the professor, dropping his eyes, the original is always destroyed in the process.

For students

A new store will soon open in East Campus. Here you will find many useful aids to simplify passing through examinations - crutches, plaster bandages, et cetera.

Education for children

After listening to Dr. Ruth Westheimer's show on sex, the children from the local kindergarten sent her a letter with one question: "What is better - playing with dolls or making love?" As always Dr. Ruth was very wise in her advice: "They both are very good, but don't forget to use a contraceptive".

AIDS is another four letter bad word. Keep away from it!

Economics today

Dr. J. Pusher-Forcer, professor of economics, informed our correspondent that he recently discovered the optimal shape of eggs. "They must be cubical to save space during transportation. Now we have a minor problem of finding the hen willing to lay the cubical eggs," explained the enthusiastic professor.

Astrophysicist to speak

Dr. Phillip Morrison, noted M.I.T. astrophysicist and host of the P.B.S. series "The Ring of Truth", will be speaking at the University of Lowell on Monday, Dec. 14, 7:30 p.m., in the Multipurpose Room of the North Campus Library. The title of his talk is "The Walls of Omaha: A Century of Strategic Fallacy."

Dr. Morrison has made many contributions to the understanding of cosmic rays, and was a pioneer in the ongoing search for intelligent life on other planets. He recently co-authored the book "Powers of Ten; a Book about the Relative Size of Things in the Universe and the Effect of Adding Another Zero."

Dr. Morrison was a project leader at Chicago and Los Alamos on the Manhattan Project which created the first nuclear bomb, and was with the first team of Americans to survey the destruction of Hiroshima after the blast. He has since then become involved in efforts to prevent nuclear war.

Sponsors include the Progressive Student Union and a group of faculty and students interested in forming a campus branch of "Campuses United to Prevent Nuclear War".

Art of papermaking is revived

The reviving of a dormant art form is taking place at ULowell. This exciting activity is happening in the studio of Marguerite Waldron. Marguerite is making paper!

This intriguing pursuit begins in a laboratory-like studio in the Dugan basement, where Marguerite has developed a degree of expertise, despite the handicap of primitive conditions.

The charming, soft-spoken mother of three, commutes to ULowell from Chelmsford. She has the full support of family members, who are delighted with her accomplishments and aspirations. Her children, Nicole, Denise, and Erik, have always been top priority, but now that they are grown, and with the support of a proud husband, Marguerite, the artist, has emerged to fulfill a long time ambition.

The paper making process is an involved one and requires an understanding of materials and their acidic content. Essentially it involves materials such as cotton rag fiber, which is dipped into a vat of pulp to form a sheet of paper. Agitation is required to acquire a "wave," visible when the pulp is dry. A wooden frame, or deckle, is placed over the mold, allowing the mixture to set. The new sheet of paper is removed from the mold by positioning it upside-down on to damp wool felt. Excess water is removed by pressing.

The beauty of handmade paper is that no two pieces are exactly alike. Each is an original.

Currently completing her second semester in senior studio,

Marguerite is looking forward to devoting herself full time to painting and drawing after graduation. Her talent and determination bear watching in the years to come. Her intriguing pursuit of making paper brings a new dimension to the ULowell Art Department.

ULowell artists exhibit

Colette Joyce of Lowell and Patricia Connery of Stoneham, candidates for Bachelor of Fine Arts degrees from the University of Lowell in December, will be exhibiting their work during the week of December 13-18.

Beginning with a reception for the artists from 4-7 p.m. on Sunday, December 13th, the exhibit also will be open to the public 1-4 p.m. Monday through Friday. It will be held in O'Leary Library Gallery, South Campus, ULowell, Wilder Street.

Colette Joyce's work illustrates Lowell architecture, presenting "new optimism for rebirth" of the city. Using mixed media both in realistic and subjective color, she has created a series of illustrative presentations capturing the essence of the community's history and the hope of its future.

Patricia Connery's work emphasizes the commercial application of graphic design and illustration. Working in mixed media, her travel posters convey a sense of the featured country's exotic atmosphere. Her series of creatively unique menu designs and business brochures compel immediate reaction.

For more information, call 452-5000, ext. 2872.

OPEN AUDITIONS!!!

Yes folks, the U. Lowell Players are once more venturing forth to center stage! Their upcoming spring production of Stephen Sondheim's "A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum" is already in the works. Auditions for this musical comedy, which will be directed by Gardner Tillson and conducted by Kay Roberts, are slated for the week of January 25th thru 29th.

Those wishing to audition must come prepared with a brief resume, monologue, and song (please include sheet music or tape). A copy of the script and score will be on reserve in O'Leary Library until the end of January. Parts include eight males, seven females, and a variety of extras. There are many opportunities for singers, dancers, and actors alike.

We will also be looking for backstage help in lighting, sound, set construction, costuming and make-up. If you've ever worked on crew before you know what fun this can be.

So, if you're at all interested and would like to know some more about this or if you have a few questions about the club in general, contact Kathy Connery Box 5071 South, or call 459-9719. Audition dates and times will be published in the Connector and posted around campus.

So what are you waiting for??? Dust off those dancing shoes, loosen up those vocal chords and BE A PART OF THE FASTEST GROWING CLUB ON CAMPUS...THE U. LOWELL PLAYERS!!!

Smarts starts with a BANG

"Wicked awesome" was the most often heard comment at the four performances of the Nutcracker -- Act II, as performed by the New York Theatre Ballet at the Center for the Performing and Visual Arts in late November. The Nutcracker was the second program in the Center's SMARTS (Students Meeting the ARTS) series. The first, a "Music Sampler" conducted by Dean Erich Lear of the College of Music, also received rave reviews from its young audience.

This fall, more than 3,400 students (K-6) and their teachers visited Durgin Hall, coming from Lowell, Billerica, Chelmsford, Dracut, Andover, Georgetown, and Marlboro. In March, more children from area schools will be delighted by "Imago," the last program in the SMARTS series. This imaginative four-member company will create a world of live, human animation using masks, movement, and mime.

Merrimack Repertory Theatre Revives A Christmas Carol

A Christmas Carol, the Charles Dickens holiday classic, will be presented by the Merrimack Repertory Theatre from December 9 through December 24.

There will be several exciting additions to this year's performance. Appearing as Christmas Present will be MRT's Producing Director, Daniel L. Schay, who recently directed The Diary of Anne Frank. In addition, ten local youngsters from Lowell's Arts Magnets School were selected to appear as the Cratchit children in alternating casts. Lowell children getting a special opportunity to work with the cast are: Laura Bowden, Joseph Butkiewicz, Jared Copley, Joshua Glasheen, Radames Gonzales, Daniel Graham, Bonnie Hoisington, Renee Jeffers, Kristina Moore, and Eric Nickola.

The theatre is located in Liberty Hall, as part of Lowell's Memorial Auditorium complex, located in the historic downtown district. It is accessible for the handicapped and is equipped with an Assistive Listening System.

Performances, which run through December 24, are selected Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays at 8 p.m., with 2 p.m. matinees on December 12, 19, and 24. Group rates are available. For more information, call the MRT Box Office at 454-3926.

Pianist to perform at ULowell

The ULowell Center for the Performing and Visual Arts will present the Springfield Symphony Orchestra and pianist Bella Davidovich in performance of works by Copland, Saint-Saens, and Rachmaninoff on Sunday, January 17 at 3:00 P.M.

Winning both critical and popular acclaim for its innovative programming and its numerous world premieres, the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, under Musical Director Raymond Harvey, has emerged as one of the nation's leading regional orchestras. Comprised of professional musicians drawn from the Springfield Symphony Orchestra was chosen by the New England Foundation for the Arts as the recipient of the Symphony Orchestra Touring Initiative program for 1988-1989. Performing since 1940, the orchestra has presented as guest-soloists such musical luminaries as Jean-Pierre Rampal, Peter Serkin, Itzhak Perlman, Marilyn Horne, and Bella Davidovich. In addition to his appearances with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, Maestro Harvey has guest-conducted the Cleveland Orchestra, the New York and Los Angeles Philharmonics, the Detroit and National Symphonies, and the Boston Pro Arte Orchestra.

Before Bella Davidovich emigrated to the United States in 1978, she had a remarkable career in Russia appearing with every major Russian conductor and performing as a soloist with the Leningrad Philharmonic for twenty-eight consecutive seasons. She was known in America only by tantalizing reports like that from Harold Schonberg of the New York Times who, when he heard her in Moscow in 1967, wrote, she "deserves to be heard in the capitals of the world."

Her American debut at Carnegie Hall in 1979 before a standing-room-only crowd was praised by the New York Daily News as a performance "music lovers will talk about for the rest of their lives." Since then, Mme. Davidovich has had concert engagements in major concert halls around the world. She has appeared with the world's leading conductors and orchestras including the Chicago, Boston, and National Symphonies in the United States and the Berlin Philharmonic and the Vienna Orchestra in Europe. She has recorded major works of the Romantic piano repertoire on Philips and Orfeo record labels.

The January 17 concert will take place in Durgin Hall on ULowell's south campus at the corner of Pawtucket and Wilder Street. The theatre is handicapped accessible and free lighted parking is nearby. Tickets are priced at $13, $15, and $17.

For more information, or to order tickets by phone with Mastercard/Visa, call the Center at 459-0350.

dinator at the Center, is pleased that the SMARTS program is providing a real service to the community, as well as developing an arts audience for the future. "Watching the faces of these kids as they experience an arts performance for the first time is a great joy," she says. Encouraged by the overwhelming success of the program, Ms. Brown plans to expand the series to twenty events next year.

Free Tickets to see Peking Acrobats

Yes, it's true. You too can be part of the excitement at the ULowell Center for the Arts and receive free tickets to see the Peking Acrobats, the world's most popular acrobatic troupe, who will perform at Lowell Memorial auditorium on April 6. All you need to do is usher at either the 3:00 or 6:00 p.m. performance of the Nutcracker Ballet, as performed by the New York Theatre Ballet on Sunday, December 13, in Durgin Hall. All participants will receive one ticket for each show they usher. If interested, call Brian Feldman at 459-0350. Don't miss your chance to see this evening of incredible juggling and balancing acts!

Engineering opportunity corner

Attention Mechanical Engineering Sophmores and Juniors! There are still Co-op positions open for the next semester. Interested students should see Professor Niemi.

The deadline for the 1988 WISE program is December 15! The Washington Internships for Students of Engineering (WISE) is an opportunity to spend 10 weeks of the summer in D.C., attending seminars on politics and researching technical issues that are being examined by Congress. Participants have the opportunity to meet some of the best engineers in their field as well as their elected representatives. Students who apply must have completed three years of undergraduate study. Notices are posted outside the department offices and you may obtain an application by writing: American Society for Engineering Education, 11 Dupont Circle, NW, Washington, DC 20036.

Announcements of the ASHRAE student competition are available in the ASME office. The competition involves writing and presenting an acceptable design project. The deadline is April 15, 1988 and top prize is $1500 with four runner-up prizes worth $750 each. ASHRAE notices and information for student members can be obtained through the ASME Information Service.

The ASME Winter Annual Meeting will be at the Sheraton-Boston, December 13-18. Tuesday, December 15, from 10:15 to 12:15 p.m., Roger Boisjoly will speak on "Ethical Decisions - Morton Thiokol and the Space Shuttle Disaster". The discussion will emphasize the telecon meeting between Morton Thiokol, Kennedy Space Center, and Marshall Space Flight Center on the evening prior to launch. Senator Gore will present the Roy V. Wright Lecture, "A Legislative Perspective on the Biology Revolution". Further information on the meeting and other talks that will be given on safety and ethics is available in the ASME office.

The next ASME meeting will be Monday December 14, at 3:30 in Ball 118. Elections will be held and the national Winter Annual Meeting will be discussed. Nominations for officers are still being accepted. Positions will be held for the calendar year 1988.

Are you an engineering senior in search of a job? Several professional resume services are listed in the ASME office. Not all services accept student resumes, but they are free and a good way to locate a job outside of the New England area.

This column is a function of the ASME Information Service. Do you have information about an opportunity for engineering students? Such information can be left in the box in the ASME office marked "Information Service" or in either of the ASME mailboxes. The ASME office is Ball 212, between the lecture halls. Please leave your name and phone or box numbers so that we can ask any necessary questions before announcing or posting the new information.

This column and service will need help to continue beyond next semester. If you are an interested student, contact John Nolin at box 542. The Information Service Coordinator's position is an office of the U Lowell ASME and is open in this election.

PROVERBS

"Does not wisdom call out?
Does not understanding raise a

Internships in arts management

The Arts Extension Service (AES) of the Division of Continuing Education at the University of Massachusetts is recruiting interns for the spring. The AES Arts Administration Internship Program addresses the growing field of arts administration by providing education and training to people interested in gaining knowledge and skills in arts management. Positions relating to arts program development, arts resource management, and arts advocacy are available. Interested people should contact AES at the Division of Continuing Education, University of Massachusetts at Amherst; (413) 545-2360.

Interns coordinate specific projects designed to provide an overview of an entire management process related to the delivery of arts services or programs. Working closely with one professional staff member, the intern takes a major role in the development and implementation of a program area. One-on-one training is augmented by workshops which address arts management skill development, careers in arts management, and other topics of interest to interns.

AES' Internship Program has won an award from the National University and College Extension Association for creative programming in Continuing Education. Numerous former interns have gone on to paid positions with arts organizations such as the national Endowment for the Arts, Affiliate Artists of New York City, Young Audiences of Boston, Connecticut Commission on the Arts, DeCordova Museum, State West, West Springfield, Holyoke Children's Museum, and the Franklin County Arts Council.

Karate Club at State Tournament

On Sunday, December 6, nineteen members of ULowell's Karate Club went to the state tournament held at Bridgewater State College. Bridgewater hosted South Eastern Mass University, Boston University, Fitchburg State, Tufts University, UMass, University of New Hampshire, Boston College, and ULowell.

The day began with the usual warm up exercises which are done to stretch out muscles. The days events were Kata- a series of movements against imaginary opponents- and Kumite- a sparring event.

Women's Individual Kata was the first event. Patricia Kearns, Wendy Johnson, and Maureen O'Connell put in a good effort for Lowell but were unsuccessful.

Women's Individual Kumite was the next event. Once again, Lowell's women-Patti, Wendy, and Maureen- put up a good fight with Wendy advancing to the second round only to be defeated.

The next event was Men's Novice Kumite. Lowell had three teams in this event. Team A was made up by Tom Branchaud, Paul Chandonnet, Jim Wilkins, Edwin Yeung and Brendan Cahill and Team B's fighters were Wei-Jay Ni, Akin D'emirag, Michael O'Connell, and Wayne Deluca. In the first round, Lowell's A team fought BC's B team with Lowell advancing. Lowell went on to fight UMass' A team and once again advanced. At this point Lowell was defeated by SMU but would go on to fight for third or fourth place. Meanwhile Lowell's B team fought Lowell's C team with the B team advancing. Lowell's B team was then defeated by BSC's A team who went on to defeat SMU's C team. BSC's A team went on to fight SMU's A team. SMU's A team won the event with BSC's A team in second place. Lowell's A team fought SMU's C team resulting in Lowell's third place victory.

Men's Kata was the next event. Brendan Cahill, Adam Wasylyshyn, John Weidkunes, Takashi Ishikawa, and Richard Buttiglieri were Lowell's team. Lowell went up against MIT and won. However, Lowell's next competitor was BC's A team. BC's A team went on to the finals to win first place.

Men's Advanced Kumite followed Kata. Here, Lowell was not so easy to defeat. Brendan Cahill, Tom Branchaud, Takashi Ishikawa, Richard Buttiglieri, and John Weidkunes fought for Lowell. Lowell's first opponent was BSC with Lowell advancing. Lowell then fought SMU, the outcome...Lowell lost by one point. Lowell took second place.

In the final event of the evening, the Boston Battle, teams fight two on two until one person is eliminated. Once a person is eliminated, the teams then fight two on one with the point going to the team with at least one man remaining. The team that wins three points advances.

ULowell's Brendan LCahill and John Weidkunes defeated their first opponents but then were defeated by Fitchburg.

All in all, the day was a success. The score was as follows:

Men's Novice Kumite
1st- SMU's A team, 2nd- BSC's A team, 3rd- ULowell's A team.

Men's Kata
1st- BC's A team, 2nd- UMass, 3rd- BU.

Men's Advanced Kumite
1st- SMU. 2nd- ULowell, 3rd- BC

Boston Battle
1st- BU, 2nd- SMU

fine gold; what I yield surpasses choice silver. I walk in the way of righteousness, along the paths of justice, bestowing wealth on those who love me and making their treasuries full."

Have you ever lied? Have you ever deceived yourself? Do you often question your motives? Do you often question your purpose? Or maybe you just don't have one. Have you ever felt no one cares anyway? You see, all of these I have experienced in my life. But one thing I do know and understand is that life is not something you cruise through, because for a mountain to exist there must be a valley.

So let's open our hearts to embrace the words of wisdom and stop judging from mere appearances. My hope and prayer is that this will not just be another nice opinion, but everyone will take some time to think about these things because nothing we desire can compare with the glory to be revealed to those who make it up to the mountain top. Wisdom's call is for everyone.

Take the challenge, make the change!

Army ROTC is the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, and it is waiting for you to make the commitment to join its professional team!

What can ROTC do for you? It can provide you with job protection, confidence, and leadership just to name a few. With ROTC you will have a steady part time job with a guaranteed income. Training will provide you with the confidence to go beyond boundaries you've set for yourself. Leadership will enable you to effectively help others, and in turn provide a better community for all.

These are not easy tasks. It can not be expected that everyone will be able to take this challenge and succeed, but you will find that with hard work and dedication you could become the new officer that this country needs. For more information please contact any ROTC cadet on the ULowell campus or contact Maj. Frank Markham Asst. Prof. of Military Science (call collect) 617-342-3190. Take the challenge today!

Leadership Excellence Starts Here

The Army ROTC and You

You may ask yourself, who joins the Army ROTC? It is a person who is motivated and ready to take on a challenge. Why do they join? There are numerous reasons. To name a few: the friendships, money for school, pride in yourself and your country, management skills, leadership experience and challenges that are worth meeting.

I have been in the Army National Guard for over two years and I am currently a member of the Army ROTC Program here at the University. I have made many friends, and have done many things that I would never have had a chance to do otherwise. For instance, I have flown in various helicopters; driven armored tracked vehicles; used sophisticated communication equipment; run obstacle courses; learned how to repel down mountains, and soon I will learn to parachute (AIRBORNE). Besides having fun, I have learned new skills and built pride and confidence in myself.

The Army ROTC is teaching me how to be an effective leader and manager. I know this skill is important in today's job market and will carry me far in any military or civilian occupation.

The leadership experience, friends, fun, and personal satisfaction make the Army ROTC an outstanding choice for any motivated college student. If you have any questions, ask any Army ROTC cadet for an answer. He or she will find an answer or two for you. However, if you want total program information, call our enrollment office collect at (617) 342-3190. Many scholarships are still available for interested students.

CDT Brady, Army ROTC

Why Army R.O.T.C.

As a cadet in the Army ROTC program here at Lowell, I have been asked many times, the question of why I got involved in the program. I have never been stuck or lost for a good answer. I believe that participating in Army ROTC will not only train me a qualified officer, but to become superior in all other aspects of my life, as a person, a student, and a citizen. I have found that ROTC trains their cadets in these qualities better than other programs available to college students. This is the major reason that I was attracted to ROTC. The program offers me the chance to improve my whole self and not just to develop military skills.

One of the aspects ROTC enforces in their cadets is to develop high standards. Not only does the program set high standards for the cadets, but these standards apply to every detail of the cadet, mental or physical. As a college student, you basically have one set of standards to follow, and that is academic standards. ROTC instills standards to every part of your college life, such as personal appearance, mannerism, and any endeavors you might have. Therefore a cadet is challenged to be superior not only in his or her academics, but in his or her life style.

Being an officer in today's Army requires a great deal of knowledge in human relationships. To be an effective leader, one must know how to work with, and supervise others. The Army officer must be an effective leader. This quality is not only valuable for the officer, but is just as valuable to the professional in the civilian world. Whether you are a Captain in the Army or an executive in a business firm, to be successful you must be able to work with the people under and above you. Unfortunately training for these qualities are not taught in most colleges. Students must gain these talents through trial and error on the job. Through ROTC I can learn these traits before I enter the working world. Therefore I can advance in my field easier and quicker because of my ROTC training.

As I continue my studies in ROTC, I become more and more confident that my future career, be it military or civilian, will be very successful. I feel that I can reach a higher level of success in school than other students and therefore be happier and more productive. As for myself ROTC has helped me become a better person and a better leader. With these beliefs I have no trouble in answering the question of why Army ROTC.

Cadet Stephen Silva

The challenge to be a second Lieutenant

I'm talking about being on your way to be a second lieutenant, as an army officer. R.O.T.C. is just the way to do it, it will then serve as your building block for your entire military career as an officer in the United States Army.

Here at the University of Lowell, I've been taking R.O.T.C. classes for one semester, and will continue for three more till I earn my commission. I'm currently enrolled in a leadership class, where I've learned a wide variety of leadership skills, which I can incorporate in any civilian or military profession.

It takes determination, wit, motivation, and a great deal of teamwork. Each of these qualities is equally important as the other to be a successful Army officer.

More information can be learned by simply contacting the Fitchburg State College R.O.T.C. telephone number, at 342-1390.

If you are the slightest bit interested and would like to be a part of this unique organization to be a part of us, take the challenge, contact us today.

Cadet, Robert F. DiSalvatore

The week after. . .

It is the Monday after the Thanksgiving break. Carol Coed and her room-mate Greta Grad have returned to the residence hall from visiting their respective families. Greta says, "I didn't have time or energy to ask you last night: How was your weekend, Carol?" "Oh, fine," Carol replies. "How was yours?" "Just great!" Greta responds with enthusiasm. "I really like school and all that; but when my family gets together, we have such fun that it's difficult for us to say goodbye to each other. Oh, well, it's only a few short weeks - and many long papers and major projects - until I'll see most of them again." Carol asks, "So, you spent all of the time with your family?" "Not all of it," Greta answers. "I had some really neat kids in my high school class. Since several of them were also home for the weekend, a bunch of us got together one afternoon and evening - sort of for old times' sake. It was great!"

Something in Greta's words starts to nibble around the edges of Carol's memory of the Thanksgiving weekend. Carol's time with her family had seemed "normal" to her; it had gone the way family gatherings usually had, and she had certainly gotten through it. But yet, now her mind flashes back to experiences from the weekend. True, she hadn't known what to expect when she had walked up to the door, but her parents had both seemed genuinely pleased to see her. Her dad had actually greeted her with wide open arms and called her his special little woman. Because her mom was under the weather, as usual, somehow it happened that she was expected to prepare the major portion of the Thanksgiving Day meal. And somehow - she wasn't quite sure how it had happened - Mom had omitted one of her father's favorite dishes. He had exploded at the table - calling her mother lazy and shiftless. She could still hear her father's angry outbursts: "You are really thoughtless! You are incapable of doing anything right!" Her mom had apologized, saying she would do better next time.

On Friday, a friend from high school had called, asking Carol to go to a movie with him. In her excitement, Carol had turned to her mother who was cleaning up the kitchen, and said: "Steve just asked me to a movie. I've just got to change into my new blue sweater." Carol's mother had caught her father's eye as he had stood up to switch T.V. channels in the living room but quickly looked away. As Carol was changing to go out, her father had come in and demanded to know where she thought she was going. When Carol told him, he launched into accusations that she was inconsiderate and ungrateful, adding, "I decide whom you are going to see and when" - and locked her into her room.

On Saturday, Carol's dad was nice.

As it turned out, Carol's friend, Steve Student hadn't had such a great weekend either - although it had gone as well as he had anticipated. In both cases, the behavior of their fathers had been designed to control and subjugate their children. The methods used sometimes varied, but included the use of fear, humiliation, verbal assaults, and, in some cases, physical assaults. In both cases, the passive behavior of their mothers resulted in an increased sense of isolation and betrayal. Such behavior patterns - the controlling behavior of one parent and the passive weak behavior of the other - are often found within the dynamics of a poorly functioning family. What ought to have been a relaxing, enjoyable family time, was filled with anxiety and a heavy sense of responsibility. But yet, they tell themselves, "My family loves me."

Carol Coed and Steve Student are not alone. Carol and Steve will hopefully join other students in talking with staff members at the Counseling and Career Development Center (X2390) or the campus ministers on campus (454-0151).

Quiet hours?

Let me tell you a little story about a man in a little blue suit and a little blue cap who usurps his authority by barging into rooms paid for by students at 4:00 in the morning. He enters immediately after knocking loud enough to wake the entire floor, turns on the light, and demands the whereabouts of a student who lives halfway down the hall. He does not wait for a response after pounding on our door and speaks to us (loudly, as you might guess) as if we should apologize to him for the interruption.

This little story, though, is not about the invasion of our privacy by this cheap Joe Friday. I understand that the student in question was not in his room and had to be found. This story is about the all-too-large ego under that little blue cap.

After disrupting our room with his search, he points his finger at everyone in the room and demands who we are, and to show some I.D. After answering his charges we informed this man and those present that I and my roommate both had a test the next morning. Realizing he had disturbed us to no gain, he does not show the maturity of a police officer and say something like, "Sorry for the disturbance, boys, but we have to find this guy." Instead, he proceeds to the next room and repeats this absurd facsimile of a 'man in charge'.

A friend of my third roommate's was asleep in the next room and his belongings were in our room. This letter does not concern itself with why his friend was ejected, its about that man's repeating display of misplaced aggression and authority. Knowing now of our examination to come, he bangs upon our door, again turns on the light, and yells for him to get his shoes and coat and get out. Another one of my roommate's friends was ejected that night. Maybe he was a little too defensive, but that does not provide any excuse for the actual threats of physical abuse that I and others heard that night.

I pay this man's salary to "protect and serve", and instead I have to put up with his arrogant attitude and his petty demand for respect. All I have to say is, when I get a formal letter of apology from this man (and you know who both you and I are) I will view your position with an open mind. Then you can earn my respect by helping instead of hindering.

If only

Drinking drivers have left trail of deaths. Crippling injuries and property damage since the automobile emerged barely a century ago as an important means of transportation. But the month of December has always been an especially hazardous time on our highways and streets because so many have the occasion to drink and so many persons are on the highways to visit relatives and friends.

December 13 through 19 marks the sixth annual National Drunk and Drugged Driving Awareness Week across the 50 United States. The theme chosen for this year's celebration of not drinking and driving is "First a friend, then a host." The idea behind it is to get to the roots of so much impaired driving this time of the year. Holiday parties.

Adding to the dangers of the season is that few drinkers realize that two drinks can affect them to the point they become prone to accidents. Large numbers of drivers involved in accidents whose blood alcohol levels exceeded the legal limit firmly believed they were sober enough to drive. The responsible driver does not deceive himself: he arranges to have somebody drive for him or her or takes a taxicab.

Even though Massachusetts repealed the compulsory safety belt law, it is not enough to stay sober to drive. Drivers and passengers should use safety belts. State police report a reluctance on the part of many citizens to wear seat belts despite their proven record of saving lives and preventing serious injuries.

Last year, during the holiday season, 70 persons were killed on Massachusetts highways. Few were wearing safety belts, which might have saved them, despite an intense period of publicity promoting their usage.

Drivers should drive at speeds in keeping with weather conditions and the amount of traffic. They should be well rested and should avoid alcoholic drinks. If they've been to a private party, a bar or a restaurant they should have a designated driver take the wheel. All drivers and passengers should buckle up. Front seat and back seat. Such precautions are matters of life and death for everyone using streets and highways during the holiday season.

Most of all, during National Drunk and Drugged Driving Awareness Week and during the up-coming holidays, if you're giving the party this year, remember: "First a friend, then a host".

Bring the Christ back....

For all of us, being students, December is a very hurried, rushed, and hectic month. Not only do we wrap up our academic semester writing papers, reading textbooks, and studying for exams, but we are also concerned and occupied with Christmas festivities such as shopping and celebrating with loved ones. We often tend to forget what Christmas is all about—that Christ our savior was born on this day to save us for eternity. The celebrating of Christmas is often signified by spending a lot of time and money buying gifts for loved ones such as mothers and fathers, siblings, and close friends and relatives. We do this having a pretty good idea that on Christmas day they will do the same for us. There is nothing wrong with this, for Jesus wants to see us be generous of one another and spend time with each other sharing. On the other hand, it is Christ's birthday, after all. Shouldn't we do a little something extra for him? What happens on your own birthday? People give you presents, they don't give them to each other. The Catholic Center is offering you an opportunity to do this formally. Located at the entrance of the Center and at some of the regular masses will be a "Happy Birthday, Jesus" birthday gift box and blank sheets of paper. On the paper you write out your personal birthday gift to Christ, it could be an intention, a sacrifice, a prayer, a thank you, or any kind of thought directed directly from you to Christ. Anyone is welcome to participate! Let's all help to bring the Christ back to Christmas! Thank you and best wishes for a happy, safe, and holy holiday season.

The C.S.O.

The Community Service Organization is new to ULowell. It is comprised primarily of members of fraternities and sororities which have recently been banned by the university trustees. The CSO is offering their services to the community in any way possible. Their most recent project involved collecting donations for the Salvation Army at various locations in downtown Lowell. Members of Sigma Phi Omicron, Tau Kappa Epsilon, Alpha Omega, Delta Kappa Phi, and Alpha Sigma Tau braved the wind and cold and collected a substantial amount of money which, at the request of the Salvation Army, cannot be published.

CSO president Kenneth Tower said, "It's unique for a university organization to be solely devoted to community service, especially members of the recently alienated fraternities and sororities. I think this only shows that we have the ability to bounce back and put a positive input into the community on a purely voluntary basis."

The CSO's next project involves coaching street kids at basketball and street hockey at the Lowell YMCA. Maureen Conrad, youth director of the YMCA, is recruiting the help of the CSO due to staffing problems at the YMCA. The CSO hopes to continue its work with the YMCA and the Salvation Army next semester, as well as some new projects. If you have any questions or comments, please contact Larry O'Brien at university box 6218.

African-Americans in History

Archie Alexander (1888-1958)

Archie Alexander (1888-1958), a design and construction engineer, left his stamp on the landscape of America by building bridges, freeways, airfields, railroad trestles and power plants.

Born in Iowa, Alexander attended the State University and received an engineering degree in 1912. After several years as a design engineer, he and a former classmate established their own engineering firm and constructed major projects across the Nation. Starting at home, they built the heating plant and powerhouse at the University of Iowa, a sewage treatment plant in Grand Rapids, Michigan, an airfield in Tuskegee, Alabama, and the Tidal Basin bridge and seawall and the Whitehurst Freeway in Washington, D.C.

Alexander received many awards during the course of his career. At the centennial celebration of the University of Iowa in 1947, President Eisenhower honored him with the appointment as Territorial Governor of the Virgin Islands. Kentucky-born Garrett A. Morgan (1877-1963), received wide recognition for his outstanding contributions to public safety. Firemen in many cities in the early 1900's wore the safety helmet and gas mask that he invented, and for which he was awarded a gold medal at the Second International Exposition of Safety and Sanitation in New York in 1914. Two years later, he himself used the mask to rescue men trapped by a gas explosion in a tunnel being constructed under Lake Erie. Following the disaster which took 21 lives, the City of Cleveland honored him with a gold medal for his heroic efforts.

In 1923, Morgan received a patent for his new concept - a traffic signal to regulate vehicles movement in city areas. "Stop" and "Go" signs were systematically raised and lowered at intersections to bring order out of chaos and improve traffic safety. Some years later, after he had sold his design to the General Electric Company, Morgan's device was replaced with the light signal in use today.

Without the outstanding contributions of thousands of African-Americans in the Arts, Sciences and Technologies, this nation would not be the leader or trend-setter that it is today. Archie Alexander and Garrett A. Morgan, two of the thousands of African-Americans who made America great.

Eng. Society

The English Society is now planning its upcoming literary magazine for next semester. To submit material, please follow these fun and easy instructions.

Type or NEATLY print submissions, one side to each page. Do not put your name on the submissions.

Put the submission into an envelope with your name and box number on it.

Drawings must be black and white ink. Photographs must also be black and white.

Send your submissions to Professor Arthur Friedman, c/o the English Department, O'Leary Library, South Campus.

The deadline for submissions has been moved to Feb. 5. But don't delay! The sooner we receive your work, the more time we have to consider and appreciate it.

Our magazine is as yet unnamed. Therefore we are having a Name the Magazine Contest, open to all U-Lowell students. The winner will receive $25 to do with as he or she sees morally fit.

Put your title idea into an envelope, along with $1 entry fee. Please include your name and box number. Send it to the English Society office, Room 339 of the McGauvran Student Center. Contest deadline is also Feb. 5.

CONTRACT FOR LIFE

The College Contract for Life
between friends

As students at the University of Lowell, we recognize that many of our fellow students and friends choose to use alcoholic beverages and, that on occasion, some students may find themselves in a potential DWI situation.

Therefore, we have entered into a contract in which we agree that if we are ever in a situation where we have had too much to drink, or a friend or date who has had too much to drink, we will seek safe and sober transportation home.

We, the undersigned, also agree that we will provide or arrange safe, sober transportation home for each other should either of us face a situation where we have had too much to drink.

If we cannot find safe transportation, we will contact a taxi service, walk or stay the night.

Northeastern should not have made way to the Forum

Hockey team demolishes Huskies 9-0

By Chas Kelley

Would someone care to tell me just what has gotten into the ULowell hockey team? It's like, first they beat BC on the road, then they take two in a row from Northern Michigan (2-0) and St. Cloud (7-5). Well, they've just added streak win number three with a humiliating 9-0 win over Northeastern, as goalie Dave Delfino picked up his fourth career shutout. The Chiefs greeted tri-captain Jon Morris' return from a two-game hiatus in a big fashion. The line of Tony LoPilato (1 goal, 2 assists), Gary Valimont (2 goals, 1 assist), Steve Ablitt (1 goal, 3 assists), Scott Drevitch (4 assists), and Tomi Maarni (2 assists) worked wonders last Thursday night, accounting for six of the nine goals scored on Husky goalie Bruce Racine. There was an added attraction for all you bloodthirsty hockey fans as well. Northeastern's Claude Lodin was taught a valuable lesson last Thursday night. After serving a ten minute penalty for grappling with Chief Conrade Thomas, he tried taking on LoPilato as well. While making his way to the penalty box, Thomas greeted Lodin with a barrage of fists to the head (Boy, it was great!)

The game looked to be a fast-paced one, as both teams raced after the puck during the opening minutes of the game. The Huskies gave Delfino some trouble early on, but he was able to deal with it. A fraction of the first period was devoted to sloppy play by both teams. The Chiefs and the Huskies encountered missed passes, lack of hustle, and various other problems. With 6:45 expired, in a crowd of players in front of the Northeastern net, LoPilato received a pass from Drevitch and Ablitt and flipped it in the net. The 'Magic Line' struck again only two and a half minutes later, with Ablitt on the scoring end of the tandem.

LoPilato and Maarni notched up assists. Solid defensive play by Drevitch and Tim Foley kept Delfino out of trouble throughout the opening period. The fast pace remained, but the goal scoring ended...for now. The score after one was ULowell-2, Northeastern-0.

The second period indicated that a more physical type of game was developing, as both teams came out of the locker rooms hitting hard and skating fast. The Chiefs' all-around defense prohibited the Northeastern from getting very many chances at Delfino. With eight and a half minutes gone in the second, LoPilato dished a quick pass to a streaking Ablitt. His shot hit the post, but Gary Valimont was there to knock it home. That line left the ice, and Morris, Randy LeBrasseur, and Jim Newhouse came on. Morris took the face off, skated to where the puck went, and nailed a sweet pass to LeBrasseur who beat Racine with a wrist shot. That entire sequence took just ten seconds, that's right, ten seconds! Delfino's goaltending continued to halt Northeastern's attempts at a comeback, despite the efforts of Dave Buda, the second place scorer in Hockey East behind Providence's Gord Cruickshank (you remember him, don't you?). The Huskies, pushed to the point of embarrassment (if they weren't already), started getting a little nasty. Defenseman Claude Lodin gave ULowell forward Conrade Thomas a rather vicious check. Thomas, not to be outdone, repaid Lodin with a check of his own. The two started struggling, but no blows were thrown. Both were given two minute penalties for roughing, and were given an additional ten for misconduct. Neither team lost a man on the ice, but neither could participate until the ten minutes were up. All this occurred with a little under four minutes to play in the second period. Twenty seconds later, a ULowell line of Jeff Flaherty, Drevitch, and Maarni streaked down the ice towards Racine. Maarni flicked the puck to Drevitch, who in turn tried to get it to Flaherty. The pass was a bit too far ahead for Flaherty to reach, but the tall forward dove after the puck and tapped it in. At this point I reached the conclusion that Racine, heralded to be the best goalie in Hockey East, had equipment made of Swiss cheese. After two periods of Chiefs on the warpath the score was Chiefs 5, Huskies 0.

The best was yet to come in the third, however, as Husky goalie Ken Baum replaced Racine in net. Thirty-nine seconds into the final period, Newhouse greeted the newest addition to the slaughter with his first of two goals on the evening. Randy LeBrasseur and Carl Valimont picked up assists on the play. Almost three minutes later, Morris and Flaherty set up Newhouse's second goal of the evening. During the entire third period, many thought that Delfino was going to fall asleep. You see, Northeastern was too busy trying to stop the Chiefs latest attacks to be making one of their own. Five minutes after their seventh goal, the 'Magic Line' did their thing once again, as Gary Valimont put a second shot by a Husky goaltender (assisted by Drevitch and Ablitt) with 11:44 remaining. The Huskies were obviously desperate at this point, yet during this ten-minute string of humiliation they did not incur one penalty minute at all. Then, the fun began. While struggling for the puck behind Northeastern's net, LoPilato and Lodin got tangled up and started wrestling. This was broken up immediately by the refs and both were escorted to the respective penalty boxes. 'Lopey' went peacefully, but Lodin gave a little bit of a struggle and then went along...well, he would have if Thomas didn't meet him halfway. Lodin skated right by the ULowell bench, and Thomas popped out and nailed him with punch after punch. He managed four or five quality shots before Lodin knew what was happening, and even then there was nothing the Husky defenseman could do (the crowd, of course, was going nuts at this point). The officials separated the two gladiators and held them back while they calmed down. Lodin, anxious to get a few shots at Thomas, strained desperately after the Chief forward, and even flattened an official (accidentally, of course). Thomas, who had a grin a mile wide, went into the penalty box first while Lodin tried in vain to reach Conrade and avenge his embarrassment. Both were served with roughing penalties and were ejected from the game for fighting. Lodin received an additional game suspension for participating in the fracas, while Thomas will sit out for a minimum of three (one for fighting, 2 because it is the second time that Thomas has received a major fighting penalty; any further action will, if necessary, be handed down by the Hockey East front office.) Once order was restored and both combatants were escorted to the locker rooms, the desecration of Northeastern's hockey team continued, as the ninth and final goal had yet to be scored. With 1:09 left to play, the Chiefs scored their third power play goal of the game. The Valimont duo, along with Drevitch (recipient of the 'Mr. Generosity' award for the game), landed the final blow on Baum. Carl, a.k.a. 'Superman', scored the goal, and the two participating members of the 'Magic Line' picked up assists.

The victory gave Delfino his third career shutout, and his second straight (his most previous start was a 2-0 win over Northern Michigan). The Chiefs record increases to 5-6-0 overall, and 4-5-0 in Hockey East. The Huskies fall to 5-5-2 overall, and 5-4-2 in Hockey East.

Skating Chiefs beat US's national team

back-and-forth skating separated that scoring flurry from the next one. With exactly four minutes left in the period, Jeff Flaherty scored on Atkinson on a beautiful display of end-to-end offense.

Stein cleared the puck out of the ULowell zone into the hands of Chief Scott Drevitch, who then threaded the needle to a streaking Flaherty. This gave the Chiefs a 3-1 going into the second intermission.

The third period would turn out to be the most exciting of this slightly lack-luster game. Both teams had a few scoring opportunities, but nothing completely enticing. Freshman Eric Richard scored the Chiefs' fourth goal with 9:11 gone in the third. Craig Charron and Carl "Mr. Wonderful" Valimont notched up assists on the score.

Three minutes later, Morris scored goal number two with help from LeBrasseur (who got assist number two, incidentally). The Chiefs seemed to be running away with the contest at this point, but only 1:12 later, USIU center Jim Hau scored against Stein with a little help from fellow forwards Mike Racz and Tom Genz.

Fifty seconds after that, Racz scored from buddies Darrin Sheehan and Matt Lundgren. These goals brought the Gulls to within two goals, but with only twenty-four seconds left in the game, Morris completed his hat trick on an unassisted goal which sealed the victory. Final score: Chiefs-6, Gulls-3.

"Fox Feud"

One hundred residents surveyed. Top five answers on the board. Name a fun indoor activity...COMING SOON!!!!

Richard Dawson returns! The family feud will return after an extensive absence from the screen. Why is this kiss crazy M.C. being allowed to make a comeback? Many believe it is due to the efforts of Mary Blair and Tricia Bue, 15th floor RA's extraordinaire. Since mid-semester they have been diligently researching the possibility of producing the Fox Hall version of the Feud. Apparently, network executives have caught wind of such activities and have decided to reactivate this popular show on national television. The results of both research efforts are that not many can resist getting excited at hearing, "Survey says...!" Prepare for Fox Feud coming to you next semester.

Afterthought: If someone approaches you with a piece of paper and says, "would you mind filling this out?" It's only a Fox Feud survey...your help will be greatly appreciated.

On December 15th, in the various dining halls across campus, members of your R.H.A., Hall Councils, and R.A. staff, will serve as waiters during dinner. This is part of R.H.A.'s "Christmas for Kids" fundraising drive. For a small donation of five dollars between a group of friends, a table will be served drinks, desserts, and have their trays removed when they are done. The money raised will be used to support local needy children through "United Homes for Children" in Tewksbury. Having your friends wait on you as well as making some child's Christmas season merry is well worth the price. Please come and show your Christmas spirit.

The only reason that I know about your challenge, is through a friend of mine who likes to read every submission in search of a good joke or two. I deem him a fool and an optimist. With due respects, The Beast

Dr. Von Domm: All of your powers would avail you nothing. As for your lifestyle, I neither need or want any part of it, having seen the results upon the person who lives it. I pity you as once a friend of mine pitied his fellow Athenians. Ah, would that Socrates could have taught me more of his methods, then I might have been able to show you what an ass you have made of yourself. The Beast Beast: Again you suprise me in your inept replies, but as the semester dwindles much like your intelligence, remember that wherever the Beast goes, ever shall Doom precede him. Doctor Victor Von Doom.

Typesetter: Indeed it has been a grand struggle, and in better times, I might have been able to call you friend. But honor is now at stake and I fear that we shall have to see this out to the bitter end. As for your sarcasm, however, it needs work. The Beast

Beast: As I recall from other struggles, times are what we make of them, not what they appear as. However, I do agree that honor is at stake and the bitter end will come at some point. Please forgive my rambling, but it is so rare to find an adversary worthy of respect. Sort of akin to the generals from opposite forces that have respect for each other, but know that they each must try and defeat the other. The Typesetter

To Everyone on the 11th Floor: I wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Tracey

Typesetter: Who are you --No fun if I tell you straight out"? What are you trying to do to me? I hope male RA's are on the even floors. You're not one of them -- or are you? Before classes end, answer my question: What floor is 'Tom' an RA on? NTK

Even still more worse jokes: What do you call it when a bomb is planted in a field full of cows? Udder destruction. Also, hom many mice does it take to screw in a lightbulb? Two- the problem is getting them in there! Until next semester -The Jokerster

To the beautiful blue eyed guy that I met at a Bourgeois party so many weeks ago. I'm so happy that we were at the same party last Thursday. Play quarters lately? Guess who. P.S. Where's my personal?!! XOXO

Congratulations to the people who worked on the Cult paper. We did an awesome job. Love, Kelli

Will The Real John Sousa Please Stand up!!!!

Steve: Thrown any girls in the shower lately? You're such a flirt. C-U Around. You know who

To Brenda in F618: Sorry for all the bad times. Can you forgive me? I hope our friendship survives because it means a lot to me. Love always, Michelle

Dear Kellie: Maybe P.J. will give you for Christmas what you been beging for all semester. Signed Good Luck

Overlord: What's the matter? Can't stand the heat? You are but another nemesis that had fallen from sight because of the inability to endure the wrath of the Life Force. In plain english, you are a wuss and a half. Life Force

Please tell me why: Gina likes to wear beer on her face... Gina saw Bambi Saturday nite dead on the back of someone's car... Colleen hasn't been out in over a month...Jen has shin splints (She claims there from running Home)... The three stooges live on...Jon and Hugh don't show up for a major exam and expect to pass the class... Paul's pants are faded in the wrong place (it's not the knees!).

To all the KY Sisters: Good luck on all your finals and have a great break! Happy Holidays!!! Kappa Love, Slate & Scramble

To the most beautiful man (according to him) at ULowell: Bogus 4's Tony C. Your Polo bathed body does funky things to us!! You are definitely the greatest - no wonder you love yourself so much! How can you deal with your awesomeness?? The Tony C. Fan Club

The Tony C. Fan Club: If he thinks so highly of himself, why does he need a fan club? The Typesetter

Anna and Nicole: Congrats, you made it so far - Good luck tonight!!! Col and Mim

Attention ULowell Men Needed: One Male. Do you owe something to society? Well here's your chance. Some very concerned friends would like to find our pal (i.e. Gina) a male companion. Qualifications: Name beginning with "G", big nose, Must be a loser/jerk, must treat girls like toilets, must leave dirty, dingy socks in her room. Look for her tonite at the Navy Yard, she'll be wearing a sign!! Thank you, some concerned friends

The Big ID, You, according to Freudians C & J, have the most over active libido on all campuses throughout America, how does it feel to be such a sex goddness? We wanna grow up to be just like you!!! Your Innocent Buddies

Attn: Gina Tumino, Miss Morality, you were so good this weekend that you deserve an award...a Bozo button or perhaps some cookies and milk!! Jen, Col & Sil

BCIE: Now you know how I felt. It is about time that you came up with an original prank. Hot-wheels

Sophie: You definitely deserve the big L for this one, waiting in his bed?? Was it worth it????!! Pee Wee's Playhouse

To the Girls is 1706: I heard about your party last saturday, lets do it one more time this coming weekend. Just remember to invite me. Left Out

Terri B (Skippy): Just wanted to say I think your "I...98! Thanks for a great semester. Interested? Forever admiring (box 1836)

Stick Whamming Green Team (Randy, steve, Moan-ek, Dana, Keith, etc.) - Yo cats! Alive and well in the land of Babes a plenty. All is good. Has Steve's genital condition cleared up yet? I want you bad Moan-ek, and I don't care who knows it. When you're ready to be held firmly by a real man instead of some wimp, let me know. Face it Keith, your piece of pork is not 16 inches long. And Randy and Dana, will you for christ sakes stop touching each other like that! Make sure you have 10 concertes at night now. Catch ya later. Chris

The members of the Life Force regrettfully announce the death of one of its founding members: The Shark. His death came about when a group of Iranian terrorists bludgeoned him with Italian bread sticks. The loss of his presence will be felt; however, there are rumours that he has been recreated as another identity

Deana, Michelle, Britt & Becky: We've got tonight sounded great but we should record The Twelve Days of Christmas. It would be a hit. Girls, doesn't seem like we're going so slow! Give Dean's uncle a kiss, sure, why not! The Little Blond

Open Auditions!! The ULowell Players will be holding open auditions for their spring musical, A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum during the last week of January. To audition please prepare a monologue and a song from this or any other musical. There are parts open for singers, dancers, actors, and stage crew. The script will be on reserve in O'Leary Library. For more info call Kathy Connery 459 9717 and watch up-coming issues of the Connector

Deej: Happy Birthday next wed and good luck on your finals

Typesetter: I reserve the right to leave your pitiful little page so that I may go on to conquer new worlds. I may return from time to time if you do not smarten up so that I may knock some sense into you. You do, however, seem to be having trouble with the Life Force. I propose that we join our vast knowledges to defeat them. If you do not, I wish you luck against them. THE OVERLORD

Overlord: Thanks for the offer, but I am not having a problem with the Life Force. Even if I were, I regret that such a partnership would violate my code. Once attacked, I disavow all past, present and future alliances with same. The Typesetter

Bopping Vestel Virgins: We were barely 17 and we were barely dressed. We've got tonight. $4000 bracelets. I'll trade you the lion for the cute, little blonde. Yes Pete, cohabitation. The Beds have germs. Oh no, she's got the camera again. Will you love me forever? Smartfood, Mike, let your brain grow. Ok, so I pushed him out of bed. I didn't throw up, by the way. I was choking! Suite for four? Love, The Queen of the Wet T-Shirt contest

Attention ULowell!!!! There is a brand new charity on campus - The Kush Beer Can Wall Assoc. Please help this needy cause. Send all of your empty (or full if you wish) beer cans to Apt. 10 behind Olsen. Thank you for your support

Kush, Glad we hooked up Sat. nite. Looks like we are going to have to do a lot more partying over the holidays. "Hey, we want some --sy!!" Spanky

Barbasol Queen - No. 6 T-shirt. Slumber party. Pound Pumpme. F-f-f. That Face says I've got not I.Q. Juliet. Yes, Romeo? I don't have a bra on. I don't have any underwear on. I love Santa Claus. The Gidle Twins. Rode trip Stand up and relieve the tension on your brain, Dee. Hold that broth. If we waited for you to come, the building would've burned down. We've got tonight. B'day party at Papa Gino's with Motley Crue. Let me sleep on it. Will you love me forever? There are germs in my room. Roommies? Love, The Original Ten on One

To the Beaver Queen: They were talking to me like nothing ever happened. You girls just wanted to see the poster in the garage. It's 2:30, where's Becky? F-f-f. 1-2-3-5, count them, 1-2-3-5 on 1. Um, could you drive a bit slower? But round No.2. If she doesn't know us and she just saw me eating popcorn off your chest, she's gonna think we are lesbians. We've got tonight. No, I'll sing from over here. Two room suite? Love, The Original Ten on One

Andy, A has been from novice Crew: Were those tears rolling down your cheeks or just the snowball melting on your face? No.7 Port

Honeee- Let me sleep on it. Will you love me forever? Two for flinching. The room has germs. Oh, Loverboy! Thanks for the toothpaste and for abandoning me in the bathroom. I'm sorry I pushed you out of bed. What else can I say? "You took the words right out of my mouth". Love, your cuddle buddy. P.S. Three out of three ain't bad either

Dave: Glowing footprints on the wall!! Well, Bitch is Rob or is it Bill? Wow, he was a big guy!! Rute Krispie

Marvin (paranoid android) - Thou dost not seem so depressed this semester. Does that meant hat the pain in you left diodes is gone? I'll send over Adam; He'll make you really depressed in no time. Trillian

Sonya (1315) Happy Birthday on Friday (or is it Sat. I can't remember what you told me). ~Joel

So Andy - What really goes on behind closed doors? And you do what 'til 4 am? Just Curious Sue, So you think he's the one, do you? I'm telling you - your probably settling for second best. Three factors my ass! Spanky

Wendy and Patty, Well here it is - now you two and Kush have something to talk about. Nice party Sat. nite - do you always share the same chair? Spanky

The Kid, Since this is the last paper of the semester, I won't give you a personal like my previous ones. I really don't think that I'm the guy you knew once before, but you never know. As far as what year I was born in - I'm one of the great 69ers. Hear from you next semester? Spanky

JEN: You were bad this weekend, 2 out of 2 shame on you, sly is rubbing off on you! You oughta learn to be more like me and Gina!!! THE GREATEST 259 KBM: I had a lot of fun Sunday! Thanks.

TO THE LOWER QUAD ON 17: Keep up the good work, if you keep throwing parties like the one you threw this saturday, you'll get a bad reputation in no time.

Hey D.C. it is true they only talk about you when they're jealous? And they're only jealous when you're good. Yes thats it!! D.H.

How was the baby batter, sweet or salty? Umm, what an appeltizer or should I say main course?? Your Innocent Buddies: J, G, & C.

ATTENTION EvmuTT... just want to get used to your new name. (aren't we a tad bit curious now?)

One-Fourth (and friends): Actually, no. I already know what "Ev" stands for and it will take more than that to get me even mildly interested. Not a bad try, but you'll have to do better. NoMuTT

From One-Fourth to Another: Looks like our friend NoMuTT was afraid that he couldn't "measure up" to his nickname and he tried to play it safe this past week by taking a break from partying. Let's see what happens this week. (probably just another powder puff game).

One-Fourth and Another: Assuming you're female, why don't you let me prove that I can "measure up" to my nickname. Could be interesting.... In any event, I enjoyed my vacation in Jamaica and I am ready to go for another round of partying. See if you can keep up. NoMuTT

Bagel: If you don't loosen up that grip, we'll never get your zipper down!! You Know Who

Bagel: What are you doing holding on to your zipper?!!? The Typesetter

Bio Guys: Countdown to your favor--- watch out!!! G4S

Jason: You sure know how to make me feel good, every time I see you. "You crack me up" M&M

G.T. What are you doing avoiding the gonad, the greek, and the goon? Are you losing your touch? Your Concerned Friends. P.S. How's the grinch or have you been avoiding him too?!!

Kick'em in Ken So when's practice? From the 3 Birthday Girls

I just found out something REALLY amazing! Mustard was invented in a Miami apartment. It was the first condimentum. -- The Punster.

NoMuTT: -- I thank you for your support. However, I do have a bone to pick with you. But know is not the time, nor here the place. I'm glad you appreciate the finer things in life (Batman). Just remember, my associates are seeking ways to enlighten you as to the error of your ways. -- The Punster

The Punster: You're very welcome. Don't worry, the secret is safe with me. I had no intention of it ever seeing the light of day. If it ever did, I would probably be banished to Noman. (Noman is an island). NoMuTT

Wally -- Sorry I'm taking so long with the introductions but the "wonderful blond" is a little shy. She keeps threatening me with grave bodily injury. But, soon all will be said and done. -- Talon

To Alex (in 8:30 Nuclear Weapons): Can't you tell that I'm warm for your form? I have been for some time. What do you plan to do about it? EA Box 53

Spanky -- It has been suggested that you might be able to help me. I've been told that you know best the information I desire. Is there anything you think I should know about what I'm getting myself into? -- 15th Floor Junior.

The Typesetter -- I'm glad you enjoyed it. Any other requests? -- The Punster.

The Punster: Next time, bring the whips, chains and Ben-wa balls. The Typesetter

The Typesetter: As for our personal trial, was it as good for you as it was for me? I never knew the mildly amusing could be so... well different. (Yeah, Yeah! That's the word). It's so reassuring to meet someone who's not turned off by my affliction arctophilia. 15th Floor Junior.

15th Floor Junior: Although arctophilia can often be serious, I believe that we caught it in time. With a little luck you will live to see 25. The Typesetter PS -Where's the whipped cream?

To the Jokerster -- I beg your pardon, nut I do believe you're muscling in on my territory. This page ain't big enough for the two of us! I challenge you to a duel. Choose your weapon, puns or jokes at ten paces. -- The Punster.

Chet and Rusty came to visit!!! Calm down girls. You can't have them. They're all mine!! (And I don't intend to share!)

Brenda -- I'm sorry to disappoint you, but it just didn't work out according to plans. Better luck next time. (If I even tell you when next time is!) By the way, I'm going to take you to court for my two wine coolers! Karen 15th Floor Freshmen: I would like to thank you for all you've done. You've made a real difference in my life. But this doesn't mean you can start slamming doors again. 15th Floor Junior.

Eva -- What are we going to do for the next month?? No trips to Papa's for a while. I think we're Bummin'!! -- Karen

Paul -- You've made me so very happy. Happy one month anniversary!! I love you. -- "Just a Number"

Did you hear about the new illuminated golf course in Nashua? It was opened for people who like swinging nightclubs. -- The Punster

The Punster: Grocoaaaannn!!!! The Typesetter

Fellow exasperated chem. labbies. Thanks for the fun times and always remember not to hate me because I am beautiful. One of the Kerrys

Anna Banana Youuu laaaaazy little sh*t. Godzilla's other friend and her roomie

To: Sluggo, Sapp Dog, Stordy, Spank, Ralph, Morty, and Kevin Slutdon (my friends and brothers in the bond) You guys are awesome!! Good Luck with finals and have a great holiday!! Phil Mahre

I am what the shark was. His allies are mine, as are his enemies. Since the Overlord has retreated from combat, I direct my attack towards you, Devastation Inc. Your threats do not frighten me, he who shall lead the struggle for supremacy on the Personals Page (along with the Typesetter). You are as effective as the scraps of fish thrown to the voracious gulls from the boats of peon fishermen. You cannot escape your... FATE. - Dr. Fate

Overlord: Beware lest ye depart from character. But one week ago you used the accepted verbiage of the personals wars. Yet now, ye cur, your words are those of the common masses. Return like Charlie and Algernon to the depths of ignorance from whence ye came. BASILISK

Life Force - It is evident to me that not all four of you are needed to
